

CORRUPTION FREE INDIA

INTRODUCTION - The term "corruption" comes from the Latin word "corruption" which mean "moral decay wicked behaviour or rottenness". Vast literature dedicate to corruption define it differently. for the purpose of this paper corruption is defined as the use of public offices for private gains (Bardhan; 1997).

Corruption is a very old social evil. It has always existed in some form or the other in human society. It is important to note that "Atharva Veda" warns people to stay away from corruption. Kautilya's Arthashastra mentions forty methods adopted by corruption people for misusing government funds.

What is corruption?

Corruption is deceitful behavior that people in position of power exhibit for personal gain. It is most commonly see amongst government officials or manager's. There are different forms of corruption, including bribery, embezzlement, extortion, networking, under-the table transaction manipulation of the election result money laundering and more.

What is the impact of corruption in India?

Corruption erodes the trust we have in the public sector to act in our best interests. It also wastes our taxes or rates that have been earmarked for important community projects - meaning we have to put up with poor quality services or infrastructure; or we miss out altogether.

Causes or Effect of corruption:-

The impact of corruption goes beyond the corruption individual the innocent colleagues who are implicated or the reputation of the organisations they work for. Ultimately, victories are the ones who loses out. Corruption erodes the trust we have in the public sector to acts in our best interest. It also wastes our taxes or rates that have been earmarked for important community projects meaning we have to put up with poor quality services or infrastructure or miss out altogether.

prevent corruption in India:-

If gone unchecked, corruption will keep rising in the community, which will result in increased criminal activities and organized crimes. Different steps can help in managing corruption and bringing it down. Education is one of the most critical steps. It can help in reinforcing the correct business practices. This way, people will know how to identify.

Conclusion:-

Corruption causes inefficiency and inequity. It is a symptom that the political system is operating with little concern for the broader public interest. It indicates that the structure of government does not channel private interests effectively.

We can conclude that corruption is a greatest single bane of our society today. It is such an evil that we are left to destroy a system left with a valueless society. It allows a transparent and prosperous social, political and economic system.

Though single citizen of India wishes to get rid of it, but it is not easy as it seems to be. It is a national dream to make our national corruption free. But how is it possible as I mentioned earlier that most important factor responsible for corruption in our own nature. So first of all we must be strong enough with high morale of fight this evil. A value based education is a must to make ourselves ethically and morally robust. Further to curb this menace, it must first be through diagnosed and then requires strong collective efforts from different sectors of society. Role of general public is utmost important. It is only when public supports leader like Anna Hazare, Arvind Kejriwal, Bhagwant Mann that government is compelled to ensure transparency and accountability in administration.

"LIMIT YOUR WANTS AND NEED
BECAUSE CORRUPTION IS THE RESULT OF YOUR GREED".